Well control, like safety, is too important to be leveraged as a competitive advantage. That's why Chevron is planning to share with the wider industry a tool - called DrillPad - that the operator launched in 2015 to assist with the planning and tracking of well control drills. The software was developed as part of Chevron's WellSafe assurance program, which certifies that every one of the company's business units, wells and contracted rigs adheres to a uniform set of standards.
